Dallas County Community College District
Class-sized Training Course Offerings

As indicated at the last board meeting, Dallas County Community College District (DCCCD) is having difficulty in filling some of their class-sized training classes. In efforts to accommodate employer needs, DCCCD proposes the addition of the five courses indicated below in "blue" for consideration. The first four courses will replace the surgical technician course funded at $244,500 with the recommended courses totaling $231,950. The college continues to work on replacing the respiratory therapist course with other high growth/high wage healthcare training and will return to the Board in November for approval. In addition, DCCCD recommends replacing their plumbing course priced at $71,500 with another construction technology course at $69,225 of which there is a higher employer demand.
